California Bank & Trust will continue processing PPP applications until funds are exhausted. As of Friday, May 8, the SBA had approved $189 billion of the $310 billion in Round 2 funding. Small businesses, independent contractors, self-employed individuals, nonprofits that qualify and have not yet applied for a PPP loan, can visit www.calbanktrust.com/cares to begin the application process.

As small businesses struggle for much-needed capital in the wake of the COVID-19 crisis, California Bank & Trust knew it had to help entrepreneurs during these challenging times. “Our deep and longstanding relationships in the communities we serve allowed the bank to process Paycheck Protection Program loan applications on an unprecedented level, both for existing clients and new clients,” said David Blackford, CEO of California Bank & Trust. “Employees have worked around the clock and through weekends on behalf of businesses that represent a broad cross section of demographic groups and geographic areas. We did it because we knew we had to deliver for local entrepreneurs facing economic challenges.”

The PPP loans also helped California nonprofit organizations, such as Feeding San Diego. The organization received PPP funding and were able to help maintain 58 jobs and continue their important work of feeding the community. In support of our local community, California Bank & Trust made a donation of $10,000 to Feeding San Diego.
